Bonus Q:

“If you say: ‘What will we eat in the seventh year? — behold! We’re not going to plant seed, and we’re not going to gather in our crops!’ Then I will command My blessing for you in the sixth year and it will produce a crop enough for three years.” (25:20)

This verse implies that the crop in the sixth year will be miraculously blessed only if the People say “What will we eat in the seventh year?” But if they don’t say this, then the land will produce only the normal amount of food. If that should happen, how would the people survive? What would they eat?

I Did Not Know That!

Rabbi Yishmael said, “When the People of Israel do the will of Hashem, they will keep shemitah one year out of seven. But when they do not do the will of Hashem, they will end up keeping four ‘shemitahs’ every seven years! How so? Their land will not be very productive, and so they will need to leave it fallow every other year (in order to replenish the depleted mineral supply).”

Bonus

If the Jewish People have trust in Hashem and don’t say “What will we eat in the seventh year?” then the food grown in the sixth year will have extraordinary nutritional value. People will need to eat only a tiny bit in order to feel fully satisfied.
