Rashi never just comments; something in the text always impels him to do so. Rashi’s comments are answers to unspoken questions and difficulties arising from a thoughtful reading of the Torah. Therefore, anyone who wants a true understanding of Rashi’s classic Torah commentary must always ask

“What’s Bothering Rashi?”

“Speak to the Children of Israel, and they shall take for Me an offering...” (Exodus 25:2)

Rashi: They shall take for Me an offering: For Me means for My sake.

Why the need for this comment? Why can’t Rashi accept the simple meaning, that the Israelites should give an offering to G-d? What’s bothering Rashi?

Answer: There are two difficulties: First the language is awkward: It should say “give Me an offering” and not “take for Me an offering.” Secondly, what sense does it make to give anything to G-d? The whole world is His. We can’t give Him anything. On the basis of these points, Rashi concludes that our act of “taking,” our offering, should be for G-d’s sake, i.e., intended for a G-dly purpose.

I Did Not Know That!
Hearing on Mount Sinai “Don’t steal... Don’t covet...” many Jews felt that they should return to Egypt to give back the gold and silver they had “borrowed” from the Egyptians. Therefore, Hashem told Moshe “Build Me a Sanctuary using the very same gold and silver that was taken from the Egyptians. For I, Hashem, would never allow ill-gotten gains to be used for My Sanctuary. The fact that I allow this gold and silver shows that they belong without question to the Jewish People. They are overdue payment which the Egyptians owe the Jews in exchange for hundreds of years of labor.”
