Rashi never just comments; something in the text always impels him to do so. Rashi’s comments are answers to unspoken questions and difficulties arising from a thoughtful reading of the Torah. Therefore, anyone who wants a true understanding of Rashi’s classic Torah commentary must always ask

“How’s Bothersing Rashi?”

Sherloxx Holmes

The Mystery of the Missing Father

Sherloxx frowned. “Why should the father be killed along with its child?” he said.

“We’ve been breaking our heads for an hour and still no clue!” said Vatson. “Let’s have tea.”

“Please,” said Sherloxx, “Read the verse again. Just once more.”

Vatson sighed and peered into the text: “A cow or sheep, it and its child you shall not slaughter on the same day (Vayikra 22:28)”.

“Go on,” said Sherloxx.

“Rashi says this refers only to the mother, but that one may slaughter the father and the child on the same day.”

Sherloxx took a long puff on his meerschaum pipe.

“I give up,” said Vatson. “I see nothing in the verse itself which excludes one of the parents! It’s an ‘equal opportunity’ verse, referring to both mother and father. If there’s a magic word which excludes the father, Rashi sees it; but I don’t!”

Sherlox jumped. “Watson, repeat that!”

“Rashi sees it, but I....”

“That’s it! Rashi sees it! Watson, you’re a genius!”

“Now,” said Watson, “I really need a tea...”

What does Sherlox see that Watson doesn’t?

[Note: The Hebrew word shor, usually translated as “ox,” includes both male and female; We therefore translate it “cow” which includes both male or female.]

Answer:

“Listen carefully,” said Sherlox. “The verse could have said: ‘A cow or sheep and its child.’ Why, then, does it say: ‘A cow or a sheep, it and its child’? The extra ‘it’ must exclude something. ‘It’ implies there’s another category, a category that’s “not it.”

“I don’t follow,” said Watson.

“Let’s say there’s a crime. What the difference between saying “Gertrude did it,” and “Gertrude, she did it.”

“Ah! I understand,” said Watson. “The word ‘she’ means ‘as opposed to someone else.’ It implies there’s another suspect, someone who’s now off the hook.

“Exactly. Here too, the word ‘it’ means we had another candidate, whom we are now excluding.”

“Brilliant! Our mystery solved, from one tiny word!”

“Now, Watson, I’ll let you tell me why we exclude the father, and not the mother.”

“That shouldn’t be hard,” said Watson. “This verse teaches us to be sensitive. Since slaughtering mother and child is crueler than slaughtering father and child, how can we exclude her? Furthermore, this verse strongly parallels the verse: ‘Do not take the mother (bird) with her young.’ It’s a related idea, and it refers to the mother. There’s no such parallel regarding a father animal; in fact, there’s no verse anywhere which refers to a father animal and its young.”

“Precisely, dear Watson. Precisely.”

I Did Not Know That!

“The son of an Israelite woman went out — and he was the son of an Egyptian man ... and pronounced the Name of Hashem and cursed....” (24:10)

The “Egyptian man” above is the one Moshe struck dead by uttering Hashem’s Name. Therefore, many years later, that Egyptian man’s ill-begotten son blasphemed the Name of Hashem through which his father was killed.
