Overview

With the death of Yosel the Book of Bereishis (Genesis) comes to an end. The Book of Shmos (Exodus) chronicles the creation of the nation of Israel from the descendants of Yaakov. At the beginning of this week’s Parsha, Pharaoh, fearing the population explosion of Jews, enslaves them. However, when their birthrate continues to increase, he orders the Jewish midwives to kill all baby boys. Yocheved gives birth to Moshe and places him in a basket in the Nile. Pharaoh’s daughter finds and adopts the baby even though she realizes he is probably a Hebrew. Miriam, Moshe’s older sister, offers to find a nursemaid for Moshe. She arranges for his mother Yocheved to be his nursemaid and help raise him. Years later, Moshe witnesses an Egyptian beating a Hebrew, and Moshe kills the Egyptian. When Moshe realizes his life is in danger, he flees to Midian where he rescues Tzipporah, whose father Yisro approves their subsequent marriage. On Chorev (Mt. Sinai), Moshe witnesses the “burning bush” where Hashem commands him to lead the Jewish People from Egypt to Eretz Yisrael, which Hashem has promised to their ancestors. Moshe protests that the Jewish People in Egypt will doubt him being Hashem’s agent, and so Hashem helps Moshe perform three miraculous transformations to validate him in the eyes of the people: Changing his staff into a snake, his healthy hand into a leprous one, and water into blood. When Moshe realizes that he is not a good public speaker Hashem tells him that his brother Aharon will be his spokesman. Aharon greets Moshe on his return to Egypt and they petition Pharaoh to release the Jews. Pharaoh responds with even harsher decrees, declaring that the Jews must produce the same quota of bricks as before, but without being given supplies. The people become dispirited, but Hashem assures Moshe that He will force Pharaoh to let the Jews leave.

Imagine a grandmother sitting with a stack of photos of her grandchildren. She takes out the pictures after breakfast and leafs through them, reciting the names of each of her beloved treasures one by one.

After lunch she has a nap, and then she takes out her photos again and recites their names over again.

And last thing at night, out come the pictures for a last time, kissing them and calling each of them by name.

The name of the book of Exodus in Hebrew is “Shemos” — “The Book of Names.” It starts with a list of the names of the children of Yaakov.

Even though the Torah had already detailed the names of Yaakov’s children in their lifetimes, the Torah lists their names again after their passing to show how dear they are to Hashem.

Something that is dear and highly prized is repeated and re-examined many times. Like the photos of a doting granny.

The children of Israel are likened to the stars: Just as Hashem counts the stars and calls them by name when they come out, and again when they pass from the world and are gathered in, so too it is the job of the Jewish People to radiate spiritual light to the most benighted and spiritually desolate corners of the world.

Being it

Pharaoh said to his people: “Come, let us outsmart it, lest it become numerous and if a war will occur, it too may join our enemies and wage war against us” (1:9-10)

“The Germans did not have DDT. Their general-purpose pesticide, which was used whether the pests were rats, lice, or whatever, was a commercial product named Zyklon B. Its active ingredient was hydrogen cyanide. Zyklon B consisted of solid disks that would give off hydrogen cyanide gas when exposed to air. Large amounts of Zyklon B were found in the Nazi camps. But there is a non-criminal explanation for this that is well documented. In the camps there were outbreaks of typhus fever, which was carried by lice. Zyklon B was the agent supposedly used to kill Jews in mass in the alleged gas chambers.”

In the Pesach Haggadah we read: “The Egyptians mistreated and afflicted us.” (Devarim 26:6) If you examine the Hebrew phrase closely, you will see that it actually says “The Egyptians made us bad.” How do you unite an entire nation in the persecution of a minority? You “make them bad.”

You conduct a smear campaign to demonize them. You turn them from people into a sub-species; into a disease. You turn them from a “them” into an “it.”

The Torah gives us a chilling vision of the future in the above verse. Pharaoh refers to the Jewish People with a masculine singular pronoun — “hoo.” You can read “hoo” as “him.” But you can also read “hoo” as “it.”

When people become an “it,” when they become in your eyes no more than an alien organism, then you treat them as any sensible person behaves when faced with a germ. You kill it. You “disinfect” yourself. You carry out a medical program of bacteriological genocide. It’s all so chillingly logical.

BELIEVING YOUR OWN PRESS RELEASE

“And Moshe grew, and he went out to his brothers” (2:11)

There once was a Hollywood cowboy who had come from a very “un-cowboyish” background: He was an assistant in a men’s clothing store in Detroit. To beef up his image a bit, the studio publicity machine concocted a new identity for him. They did a quick face-lift on his life story, which now depicted him being discovered in a Wells Fargo telegraph office in a small cowboy town in Arizona. It happened one day that at the peak of his fame the Hollywood cowboy came to that small town. As befitting his fame, he was given a ticker-tape parade down Main Street. As he was riding on the back of his open limousine, his car passed the Wells Fargo office. He leaned across to his press agent — the very same press agent who had re-written his past — and said to him without batting an eyelid:

“You see that Wells Fargo station? That’s where I was discovered....”

One of the dangers of fame is that you can start to believe your own press release.

The M'drash tells us that when Moshe “grew,” he grew “not like the way of the world.” The way of the world is that when a person grows and becomes celebrated and famous, he forgets his roots, his history and his brothers. He seems to have a kind of insidious way of the world.

“...and he became celebrated and famous, he forgets his roots, his family, and his brothers. He seems to have a kind of insidious way of the world.

When people become an “it,” when they become in your eyes no more than an alien organism, then you treat them as any sensible person behaves when faced with a germ. You kill it. You “disinfect” yourself. You carry out a medical program of bacteriological genocide. It’s all so chillingly logical.

THE PRINCE OF PROPHETS

“And a man from the House of Levi went and married a daughter of Levi” (2:1)

When writing about the union of Moshe’s parents, why didn’t the Torah just say “And Amram went and married Yocheved”? In his lifetime, Moshe achieved a closeness to Hashem unequalled by any other human being. He alone ascended to heaven and received the Torah for Israel. He alone spoke to Hashem face to face, with crystal clarity, unlike all the other prophets.

There was a concern that in the course of time someone might say that Moshe came from heaven, and make Moshe into a god. For this reason, the Torah stresses that his origin was as normal and earthly as anyone. “A man from the House of Levi married a daughter of Levi.” Although Moshe was the prince of prophets, his parents were regular flesh and blood.

Haftorah: Yishayahu 27:6-28:13, 29:22-23

Yaakov had two names: “Yaakov” and “Yisrael.” The Jewish People are called by both of these names.

The name Yaakov depicts the experience of the Jewish People in times of degradation and hardship. Yisrael connotes the Jewish People realizing its potential.

The Prophet Yishayahu lived in a time of spiritual decay. He begins the Haftorah with the prophecy that the “root” of Yaakov, like all roots, though unseen and trampled by all, will once again bring forth its luxuriant produce.

THE REVOLUTION THAT WENT WRONG

“To whom shall one teach knowledge, who can be made to understand a message? Those weaned from (mother’s) milk, removed from the breast” (28:10)

Since the time of the Industrial Revolution, we have witnessed an ever-accelerating development of science and technology. As the Zohar predicted, from the year 5600 the gates of wisdom were opened. If the Jewish People had been worthy, this tremendous outpouring of knowledge would have found its proper home in the wisdom of Torah and holiness. Now, since we were not worthy, this diffusion of higher energy has found its way to the realm of superficial wisdom and precipitated the invention of weapons of mass destruction to humanity’s profound loss. From the day that the Beis Hamikdash was destroyed, “prophecy was given to fools and infants.” Meaning, that when the Jews dwelled in the Holy Land, celestial energy, both spiritual and material, descended to its correct landing place. However, since the destruction of the Beis Hamikdash, this spiritual radiance has gone astray — descending on desolate lands and unsuitable people — “fools and infants.”

This is what the prophet means when he asks whether “those weaned from (mother’s) milk” can be “made to understand a message.”

THE WATERPROOF LAND

Noach knew that the waters of the Deluge had begun to recede when the dove he had released from the ark returned with an olive leaf in its mouth. (Bereishis 8:11)

Where did the dove manage to find a leaf in a world so completely devastated by flood waters? From the branches in Eretz Yisrael, says Rabbi Levi. This is in accordance with the opinion of the Sages who say that Eretz Yisrael was not affected by the Deluge. This view finds expression in what Hashem told the Prophet Yechezkel about this Land that “it was not rained upon in the day of fury.” (Yechezkel 22:23)
