A Time for Full Praise

Why do we say the entire Hallel all the days of Sukkos and only half-Hallel on Chol Hamo’ed Pesach and the last day(s)? The explanation offered in our Gemara is that the same number of sacrifices were offered each day of Pesach in the Beis Hamikdash. We view the entire festival as one unit, for which the complete Hallel said on the first day(s) suffices as an expression of praise for the entire Pesach. On Sukkos, however, there was a change each day in the number of bullocks offered, and each day is viewed as a separate unit, requiring a new recital of the complete Hallel.

The Seven Year Search

There is a historical tradition that it took the Israelites under the leadership of Yehoshua seven years to conquer the Land of Canaan promised to them by Hashem, and another seven years to divide the land amongst the twelve tribes. What is the source in Tanach for this tradition? One of the Gemara’s answers to this question is based on the need to reconcile a passage in chapter 40 of Yechezkel with our historical tradition of when the conquest took place. O n Sukkos, however, there was a change each day in the number of bullocks offered, and each day is viewed as a separate unit, requiring a new recital of the complete Hallel.

In the Midrash we find another explanation. On the seventh day of Pesach the Egyptian pursuers of the liberated Israelites drowned in the Yam Suf. This is, therefore, not a day in which to sing praise to Hashem in the form of the entire Hallel. One reason is because King Solomon’s warning (Proverbs 24:17) that “You shall not rejoice in the fall of your enemy” (Beis Yosef on the Tur, Orach Chaim 490). Another reason is because we recall what Hashem told the angels when they wanted to sing His praise at the time when the Yam Suf split to save the Israelites and drown the Egyptians: “My creations are drowning in the sea and you wish to sing My praises!”

The Turei Zahav adds that even though this latter reason applies only to the seventh day, we also refrain from saying the entire Hallel on the days of Chol Hamo’ed in order not to give the intermediate days of the festival a more important status than the final day(s) when the activities permitted on Chol Hamo’ed are prohibited.

Why was it necessary to supply the explanation of the Midrash in addition to the one given in our Gemara? One answer that has been offered is that two reasons for saying the entire Hallel are found in our Gemara: 1) A day that is called a “Mo’ed” in the Torah and in which work is prohibited. (Shabbos is eliminated because it is not a Mo’ed, and Rosh Chodesh is eliminated because work is not prohibited.) 2) A day when a great miracle took place (Chanukah’s eight days). Pesach contains both elements. It is a Mo’ed in which there is a ban on work, and it is a time when the miracles of the Exodus and Splitting of the Sea took place. While the reason given in our Gemara is sufficient to explain why the holiday aspect does not require entire Hallel for the entire festival, we still need the reason of the Midrash to explain why we do not recite the entire Hallel in praise of the miracles which took place.
